Matinee's Reading "Outstanding"

• I do want to add my thanks to the hundreds of others I know you will receive for the reading of "Jane Eyre" (on Trans-Canada Matinee, CBC Radio). It is an excellent book, of course, but the reader brought it to us in such a thrilling way that it is one of the most outstanding items I have heard on Trans-Canada Matinee in all my years of listening to it.

I enjoy all of Trans-Canada Matinee very much. Do keep up the good work. —M.F.W., Calgary.

Enthusiastic About CBC

• This letter is directed to the CBC in general and not to any one department in particular.

We were watching Inquiry just now and decided to write. . . . To put it mildly we are enthusiastic about our CBC — and I use the term "our" deliberately. What impresses us most, and what we value so highly, is the forthright and generally accurate presentation of the news. We enjoy and appreciate your efforts to take a critical and calculating look at various aspects of our own and other societies, economics and politics.

When we hear of any efforts to weaken the CBC, it causes us much concern. We hope it will continue to be a source of unbiased news and opinion. However, we also enjoy hearing a variety of opinions, even though they may be biased, as long as there is a good balance.

. . . Just a word about CBC Radio. reports, women's programs, etc. . . . There are some grand programs: the University of the Air series, panels, Keep up the good work. We have been listening steadily since 1948, and our only criticism is the increasing number of commercials heard and seen.—F.A., Lowe Farm, Man.

No Crashing, Banging . . .

• I usually spend about three weeks to a month in western Canada and I listen to your station (CBW Manitoba) which I appreciate. Within the last month we have discovered that we can hear your station each morning on our car radio as we come to town, between 6:00 and 6:30 a.m. your time. . . . I do not know if this is a distance record for your station, but we are approximately 1,200 miles away. . . . I appreciate the fact that I can hear 30 minutes of radio without crashing, banging, screaming commercials.—E.H., Lebanon, Indiana.

A Dream Come True?

• The complete naturalness and naive charm of "Dreams" (Quest, Feb. 18th) was certainly refreshing among the deluge of stereotyped productions from south of the 49th. I myself am a teenager making the transition so well expressed in "Dreams." By the way, who were the two young people?—D.S., Calgary.

Roy Bonin, a Toronto artist, and Sharon Younger, a former waitress, played the parts of the young couple. They are not professional actors, but their personalities and social backgrounds are similar to those of the characters they portrayed, meaning they were actually "living" their parts.

Disagrees with Critics of "Crawling Arnold"

• Please let me state to the CBC how much we enjoyed Jules Pfeiffer's play "Crawling Arnold." I was about to write to ask for a repeat performance when suddenly, in the local press, appeared reports from Ottawa and elsewhere condemning the play as "filth." This was very different from the reaction to the play of ourselves and those of our friends who saw it.

To us, "Crawling Arnold" seemed an extraordinarily witty satire on some aspects of modern North American society, wonderfully well acted and terribly funny. Anyone who is familiar with Jules Pfeiffer's cartoons knows well his sharp, satiric glance at present day society.

Although there will now be no likelihood of a second performance of this particular play, may I take this opportunity to praise the CBC's policy of artistic independence. — D.T.G., Edmonton.

Architects of Modern Thought

Hirsch Discusses Stanislavsky

JOHN HIRSCH, artistic director of the Manitoba Theatre Centre, discusses the life and art of Constantin Stanislavsky Wednesday at 10:30 p.m. on Architects of Modern Thought. Stanislavsky, the famed Russian actor, theatrical producer, director and co-founder of the Moscow Art Theatre, did away with mechanical theatrical techniques and encouraged his performers to develop and interpret their roles from within themselves.

Known the world over, the name of Stanislavsky has become a theatre byword even among those unfamiliar with the method itself. Studied not only by actors, it is of equal importance for theatre

Petite Denyse Ange, heard on such radio shows as Camilleri and Company (Wednesdays at 11:45 a.m.), is guest Friday on CBC-TV's Tommy Ambrose Show, along with singer Tommy Common. She is a native of Quebec City.

THE JOYS OF RAISING foster children occurs as the theme of two very different current CBC presentations—one on television, the other on radio.

Room for One More, a new comedy series about a married couple who make a hobby of "collecting" affection-starved children, started March 5 on the CBC-TV network, and is seen each Monday evening. The series is based on an autobiography by Anna Perrott Rose. Andrew Duggan and Peggy McCay star as George and Anna Rose, parents of Flip and Laurie (Ronnie Dapo and Carol Nicholson) and foster parents of Mary and Jeff (Anna Capri and Tommy Rooney).

Six More at Sixty, story of a couple who, at the age of 60, become foster parents of six Mexican children, is being read from daily starting this week on Trans-Canada Matinee, heard Monday to Friday afternoons on CBC Radio. The book is a collection of Robert Hyde's notes about how he and his wife adopted the children, aged three to twelve, and raised them in their home at Santa Barbara, California. Actor Douglas Master continues the reading until Friday, March 16.

IF IT SWINGS—it can "Twist"—at least that's the feeling of teenagers who appear on CHAT-TV's "Sock Hop" in Medicine Hat. The many teenagers who frequent the Saturday afternoon show believe you can do the "Twist" to any beat, even the stately "Minuet"—and from time to time they prove it on air.

"Sock Hop" was conceived three years ago by staff announcer Doug Burgess, and has proved increasingly popular with the Medicine Hat teenage crowd. The format is different every week but usually includes teen fashions, high school news and sports, interviews, games, contests and dancing.

Since the "Twist" began shaking up "the Hat" host Doug Burgess, weighing in at 210, naturally fell heir to the nick-name "Chubby."

writers, and Clifford Odets says of it: "It is a simple common sense approach to releasing and bringing into play the creative powers that all actors have in them by virtue of themselves being living human beings."

Stanislavsky has developed techniques for the creation of character and the general stimulation of imagination, covering characterization in physical terms—speech and voice, movement, gesture, tempo and rhythm, perspective on a character and a whole play—and the training that will make these components convincing.

Born in Moscow in 1863 of a well-to-do merchant family, Stanislavsky became interested in acting through family theatricals. It was still as a semi-amateur that with Nemirovich-Danchenko he founded the Moscow Art Theatre, which was to become the most highly acclaimed professional company of the modern theatre. For 40 years he was not only its co-director and guiding force but one of its chief actors.

In his autobiography, My Life in Art, he wrote: "When I look back over the roads I have travelled in my life in art, I want to compare myself to the gold prospector who first had to make his way through impassable jungles . . . and later wash hundreds of tons of sand and rock to find at last a few grains of the pure metal."

Those few grains of gold, passed on to his students and contained in his three books, not only built the Moscow Art Theatre, but affected the art of actors, and all artists dealing with character, the world over.

"HERE There Be GIANTS"

The vast Northwest, probed by Bering and MacKenzie, held many dangers, real and imagined. CBC-TV's Discovery discloses the hardships of those first adventurers in a new series.

FOR MEN OF adventure early in the 18th century, one of the most tantalizing parts of the world was the uncharted, unmapped area lying west of what is now the middle of Alberta, to Kamchatka on the east coast of Asia. In the following century-and-a-half many daring explorers chanced their way through this vast, mysterious region, with its rich fur trade as the tangible prize for success. Among them were Bering, Hernandez, Quadra, Cook and Vancouver who came by sea, and MacKenzie, Fraser, Thompson, Lewis and Clark who ventured overland.

Stories of the achievements and discoveries of two of them, Bering and MacKenzie, will be presented on CBC-TV's Discovery in a short series called Here There Be Giants—Bering's on Sunday, March 11, and MacKenzie's on March 25 and April 1. The title is taken from the wording on an ancient map of the northwest area the programs focus on.

Danish-born Vitus Bering had retired from the Russian navy as a commander in 1724 when Peter the Great recalled him to head a voyage to determine whether Asia and America were linked by land. By the time Bering returned five years later, Peter the Great had died and so had his successor, Catherine. Empress Anna, now on the throne, and her intrigue-ridden court raised sceptical eyebrows over Bering's undocumented findings. But eventually he managed to convince some of them that he should return to the northwest, and a mammoth expedition was planned—perhaps the largest ever attempted. Bering was to travel 6,000 tortuous miles overland from St. Petersburg to Kamchatka with 1,000 men, including scientists, ship-builders and artisans to accommodate any emergency as well as 2,000 horses to pull the tons of equipment they took with them.

Four years later Bering had reached the port of Okhotsk, but it took him another four years to surmount the obstacles of greed and corruption among his companions, finish the construction of two ships, St. Peter and St. Paul, and set sail for the Pacific coast of North America. The strain of this huge undertaking, and the debilitating effects of fever and scurvy brought about Bering's death before he could enjoy the success of his venture. He died on the sands of the island that bears his name in the Komandorski group west of the Aleutian islands.

One result of his discoveries was the opening of Alaska to Russian fur traders, news of which reached Montreal and London as Russian rubles began to appear in coastal settlements south of Alaska. This, and the publication of Captain Cook's map, made on his voyage in 1778, fired the imagination of a 26-year-old Scotsman named Alexander MacKenzie.

MacKenzie was then a wintering partner in charge of the Athabaska region for the Northwest Company. He suggested an expedition, but the Company and his partners turned thumbs down on helping him discover the legendary waterway to the Pacific ocean. Unlike Bering's government-sponsored expeditions, MacKenzie's were entirely on his own initiative.

His first attempt, in 1789, led him not to the Pacific, as he had hoped, but to the Arctic Ocean

The horrible aftermath of atomic war is the theme of The Offshore Island, Monday on Festival

THE DISTINGUISHED stage actress, Irene Worth, last seen in North America in the 1960 Broadway production of Toys in the Attic, plays the leading role in this Monday night's Festival production. It is The Offshore Island, a dramatic, moving play combining love, tenderness and mental horror — a first stage work by Marghanita Laski, a well-known British novelist, critic and broadcaster who has appeared frequently in BBC-TV's Brains Trust series. Production is by Eric Till.

The play's setting is England, a decade after the outbreak of a thermo-nuclear war that has destroyed Europe. On a farm, in a tiny piece of land that has remained miraculously uncontaminated, a 40-year-

MARCH 11

See also page 4 of next week's issue for possible changes in these notes and additional program information

World Of Sport

Canadian Curling Championships. Doug Maxwell describes video-taped highlights of a regulation, 12-end match in the Canadian Curling Championships held in the Kitchener Memorial Arena March 5-9.

The tourney features one team from each of Canada's ten provinces and one from Northern Ontario. It is a round-robin affair with each rink meeting each of the other rinks once. The program features an important game—probably the one that decides the winner of the tourney. Producer, Ty Lemberg.

Junior Magazine

Concert

Music For A New Pair Of Ears. (The Contemporary Musical Idea). Host is Louis Applebaum. The performers are: soprano Elizabeth Benson Guy; Juilliard String Quartet; CBC Symphony Orchestra conducted by Russell Stanger.

Pacific 231	Honegger
Lyric Suite	Berg

Heritage

An Anchor In The Storm. (Lutheran). Written by Alf Harris. James Harper, pastor of a Lutheran Church, takes it upon himself to decide who is worthy or repentant enough to receive the comfort and the blessing of Holy Communion. He finally discovers what the words of forgiveness, compassion and understanding mean and comes to realize that if anyone is unworthy of receiving Communion, it is himself.

Principals in the cast are: Frank Perry as Pastor Harper; Vernon Chapman as Pastor Peterson; Alfred Gallagher as Mr. Potter; and Mickey Moore as Peggy Hawes.

Sharon Acker gives one of her finest performances Sunday when Quest presents The Neutron and the Olive.

Discovery

Here There Be Giants. The beginning of a three-part series about the great explorers of the northwest. The title is taken from wording on an ancient map of the area. Today the story of Vitus Bering is told.

Citizens' Forum

Industry And The Way People Live Industry On The Prairie. The program examines the effects of industrial and technological changes on farming communities of the prairies, particularly in the area of Carberry, Manitoba.

Reflections

A program of music and song with a regular cast consisting of violinist Francis Chaplin, soprano Jean Marshall, baritone Clarence Fleiger, harpist Phyllis Ensher, pianist Carol Hughes, and a string orchestra under the direction of Gordon MacPherson. Host is Pat Napier. Produced by Robert Alban.

Walt Disney

The Prince And The Pauper. A film version in three parts of Mark Twain's famous adventure story.

Part I. The Pauper King. Two boys are born at the same hour—Prince Edward Tudor, only son of Henry VIII, and Tom Canty, a peasant. The boys look alike and when they are thirteen years old they meet and exchange clothes and roles, curious about each other's way of life. They plan to resume their true identities but due to unforeseen circumstances they are forced to continue in their assumed roles.

The Wayne And Shuster Hour

Starring Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster with dancer Don Gillies and vocalist Sylvia Murphy.

Sketches: The Gypsy Student. A satire on an operetta in which Wayne plays a prince, who, attending university, hides his royal identity from his fellow students. Sam Casey. Wayne portrays a dedicated garage mechanic who works day and night to fix a "sick" car in the garage of his boss Mr. Zorber.

Ed Sullivan

A salute to St. Patrick's Day with special guests: actress Maureen O'Hara; singer Rosemary Clooney; and veteran musical comedy star Pat Rooney Sr.

Bonanza

The Law Maker. Ben Cartwright promotes a neighboring rancher as a replacement for the town's wounded sheriff but soon regrets his decision.

Close-Up

Teaching Machines. An examination of one of the latest innovations in education—the teaching machine—which educators predict will revolutionize teaching procedures in schools.

A film taken at Langley High School in Vancouver, one of the few schools that has introduced teaching machines on a fulltime basis for the teaching of mathematics, shows how the machines work and how the students use them in conjunction with the teacher.

Bob Quintrell directed the film and interviews James Clark, a teacher at Langley High School.

Quest

The Neutron And The Olive, by Rudi Dorn. A young man, bitterly disturbed by the world situation and the threat of nuclear war, expresses his feelings to an attractive girl in the slightly alcoholic haze of a cocktail party.

Rudi Dorn is a CBC set designer and designed the sets for this production. Host is Robert Whitehead. Produced by Paul Almond. Starring Sharon Acker and Bernard Hayes.

CBXT—Tightrope

SURVIVORS OF THE HOLOCAUST

old mother (Miss Worth) has survived with her 16-year-old son (Tony Kastner) and her 18-year-old daughter (Janet Reid). Some miles away, by the sea, another small group has also survived the holocaust, and one of them, a 55-year-old man (Tony Van Bridge), visits the farm periodically with supplies of fish and other provisions. These people believe they are the only ones left alive on earth, and with a passionate faith in life are gradually adjusting to their strange existence and unpredictable future. One day a helicopter arrives with some U.S. soldiers in decontamination suits, bringing with them both hope and fear.

Producer Eric Till says, "The Offshore Island is an anti-war play, written from a certain point of view, and whether a person agrees with its premise or not, there is a lot in it to provoke thought. Although it has no visual horrors, it is a play for adults. It is a dramatic expression of controversial ideas, and its assumptions and arguments are provocative and debatable. It is not sensational, but presents its ideas in quiet, realistic terms. It is unsuitable for children, principally because some of these ideas are frightening."

The Offshore Island was first produced on BBC-TV three years ago with Ann Todd in the role Miss Worth plays, and attracted considerable attention.

Irene Worth was born in Nebraska in 1916. After studying at the University of California she decided on a theatrical career and made her debut in 1942 on tour with Elizabeth Bergner in Escape Me Never. During the first season of the Stratford (Ontario) Festival in 1953 she played Helena in All's Well That Ends Well, and Margaret in Richard III, and in the 1959 season she returned to play Rosalind in As You Like It.

Channel 6—CBWFT

Homage to Claude Debussy

One of the major attractions this week on Channel 6 is the Thursday evening Heure du Concert, at 9:00 p.m., dedicated entirely to the memory of French composer Claude Debussy.

Debussy's was essentially a spirit of revolt, and he manifested such tendencies early in life. Thus at the age of 16 he was found differing with his superiors at the Paris Conservatory on doctrinal matters. Yet he proved a Soprano Pierrette Alarie is among the guests on "Music-Hall," Sunday, Mar. 11, at 8:30 p.m., with her husband Leopold Simoneau. Miss Alarie also is featured in the "Tribute to Debussy," Thursday, Mar. 15, at 9:00. She will sing three melodies by the French composer.

brilliant enough pupil to merit the Prix de Rome six years later with the cantata "L'Enfant prodigue" (The Prodigal Child). Alfred Bruneau could say a scant two decades later, "One will search vainly in the academic cantata 'L'Enfant prodigue,' of which the gentle Guiraud his (Debussy's) master, was so proud, for a (Please turn to page 25)

Folk-Singing's in Their Blood

EVERY THURSDAY evening at 10:05 the haunting "Shenandoah," sung by a baritone voice, marks the beginning of another half-hour of folk songs by one of the most exciting folk-singing duos to be heard in Western Canada.

Although the program has been on the CBC radio network for only a few weeks, it has brought enthusiastic and wide-spread response from such places as far away as the Yukon Terri-

The two young men who are the cause of all this are singer Reg Gibson and his accompanist, guitarist Jimmy Pirie. Reg has a warm baritone voice that lends itself admirably to the many sensitive interpretations that folk singing demands. Jimmy, who is a virtuoso guitarist in his own right, often joins Reg to supply the harmony; and when he steps forward with a solo of his own, he reveals the inborn talent of the traditional folk singer by making the hackles rise with a rendition of such songs as "Sinner Man."

The show's producer, Alan Tasker, believes the reason for their success is the goal of simplicity in producing the program, and like most artistically simple objectives they are sometimes the hardest to attain. "Don't misunderstand me," says Tasker, "we're not folk-song purists. In our repertoire we have everything—medieval ballads, mountain country hollers, and Negro and White spirituals. But we don't have any jazzed-up versions, any tunes slicked up to hide the fact of not understanding the subject matter. We try to render the folk songs in their original simplicity and thus reflect their real and genuine expression."

To understand the popularity of Shenandoah, one also has to understand the contemporary revival of this traditional art form. Paul Ackerman of the Billboard recently pointed out that "the emergence of folk singing is only the most recent development in a pattern which began to unfold the moment New York City lost its exclusive franchise to grind out North America's popular music."

It was an illiterate Nashville poet named Hank Williams who brought about this musical upset with a song called "Cold Cold Heart." The song was an immediate hit in 1951, and was effective in bridging the gulf between popular and country music. Hank followed it up with half a dozen other hit songs before he died in 1953. But the revolution was consolidated and from then what followed might be termed "a back-to-the-soil" movement, which travelled progressively through various stages of aborted versions of ethnic and folk music, until the late fifties when authentic folk music triumphed and began to enjoy mass appeal.

CBC Wednesday Night

Jazz for the Connoisseur

JAZZ TRUMPET man, Conte Candoli will be the guest artist with Dave Robbins and his 22-piece orchestra on CBC Wednesday Night, March 14. The fifty-minute program will be devoted to Gillespiana—a suite for jazz quintet and brass orchestra. The suite is composed by the young South American composer, Shifrin, who has dedicated this work to Dizzy Gillespie for whom he worked for a number of years as pianist. It was first publicly performed in 1961 at the Monterey Jazz Festival.

The composition is in five sections: Prelude, Blues, Africana, Panamericana and Toccata.

The lead trumpet part in Gillespiana requires such a high degree of both technical skill and jazz feeling that only a select few of the many jazz trumpet players in the United States could master the work. Conte Candoli is one of those few.

Candoli has played with the two most acclaimed jazz orchestras of the past 20 years. In 1945 at the age of 18 he joined Woody Herman's first herd—the band that recorded such hits as Caldonia, Apple Honey and Bijou. In 1948 he played featured trumpet for Stan Kenton's orchestra. He rejoined Herman in 1950 and went back with Kenton for two years, commencing in 1952. Since 1954 he has been freelancing in the Los Angeles area, appearing at many jazz concerts and has many record albums to his credit. The U.S. jazz critic Leonard Feather has

METROPOLITAN OPERA

Orpheus and Eurydice—Opera in four acts by Gluck.

Cast: Orpheus—contralto; Eurydice—soprano; Amor—soprano; The Happy Shade—soprano.

Act I. At the tomb of Eurydice. Orpheus and his friends in grief mourn for her. Orpheus prays the gods to restore his wife and is ready to descend to Acheron's shores to regain her. Amor appears. He tells Orpheus that Zeus has taken pity on him and that he may descend to Hades to touch the heart of Pluto and of Minos by his song. But he must not turn his head to look at Eurydice until he has left the shores of the Styx. If he does, death will hold her forever. Orpheus implores the aid of the gods.

Act II. Tartarus. Ballet of Furies. Orpheus appears at the entrance of Hades and is accosted by the Furies and the shades of the departed. Orpheus asks for mercy. They call him a sacrilegious mortal and Orpheus gives vent to his grief. The shades are mollified by his sweet singing. Orpheus sings again and they allow him to enter Hades.

Act III. The Happy Valley. Dance of the Blessed Spirits. Orpheus arrives. He inquires for Eurydice. The happy ones console him. They bring his wife and averting his head, he takes Eurydice by the hand and leads her away.

Act IV. A wood. Orpheus leads Eurydice from a cave. He has relinquished her hand and begs her to follow swiftly. She implores him for one look of love and when he refuses she believes he no longer loves her. In despair she wishes for death. He can resist no longer and, forgetting Amor's warning, turns to gaze upon her. Eurydice dies once more. Orpheus is in despair. He declares that she will not pursue her sad path alone for the second time and will die with her. Amor approaches. Believing that Orpheus has suffered enough, the god of love again restores Eurydice to life and Orpheus leads her back to earth.

trace of the tendencies which now ravish some and shock others." The rebel, it seems, could adhere to the line of tradition and authority when he was so moved.

He never completed his course at the Villa Medici in Rome, returning to Paris, which, like the rest of the musical world, was then at the feet of Richard Wagner. But Debussy capitulated to the siren beckonings of a group of painters known as the "Impressionists," also rebels who strained at the leash of dogma. They were headed by Edouard Manet, whose researches pursued the theory of the effect on color by light and atmosphere. To a mind and an imagination as sensitive as Debussy's, these were provocative advancements. He consorted with the proponents of the theories, and he became intimately conversant with their works.

Then, turning to the writers and poets Stéphane Mallarmé, Pierre Louys, Paul Verlaine and André Gide, the "Symbolists," he found further stimulation. The barely recognizable ideas began to take shape. It was during his spiritual apprenticeship with the Symbolists that he composed his "Ariettes oubliées," and here was revealed for the first time the Debussy of later years.

Guests on this special tribute to Claude Debussy are Pierrette Alarie, soprano, who will sing three well-known melodies by the French composer: "Apparition," "Harmonie du soir" and "Fantoche"; cellist André Navarra and pianist Guy Bourassa will play the "Sonata for cello and piano"; the Kroll Quartet will perform the "String Quartet"; flutist Mario Duchenes, who will perform "Syrinx" and finally, the Vocal Ensemble will sing "Trois chansons de Charles d'Orléans."

Homage to Claude Debussy, Thursday, March 15 at 9:00 p.m. on Channel 6, CBWFT.

along the river now named after him. Still confident of eventual success, he went to England in the winter of 1791 to study astronomy and navigation, and the next year set out again from Fort Chipewyan. After wintering in a trading post he established at the fork of the Peace and Smoky Rivers, he began his great westward expedition in May, 1793. With 10 men and 3,000 pounds of baggage in only one canoe, MacKenzie attempted to run some of the roughest water in the world, and succeeded, but not without enormous hardships and discouragements. When his journal was published in England in 1801 he acquired the fame he had dreamed of, and became a major power in the fur trade.

Roland Hunter appears as MacKenzie; Neil MacLeod as Roderick MacKenzie, Alexander's cousin; Ted Grandke and Ted Stidder as two voyageurs, Ducette and Landry, who accompanied MacKenzie on both expeditions; Ted Greenhalgh as Alexander McKay, his lieutenant on the second expedition; Ivor Harries as the Cree Indian Chief; and Brian Butcher as an English guest.

In the Vitus Bering story Sam Payne appears as Bering; Wally Marsh as Lieutenant Waxall; David

Hughes as the scientist, George Steller; Reg McReynolds as Peter the Great; Hjalmar Olsen as Admiral Apraxin; and June Claman as Empress Anna. Production and direction of Here There Be Giants is by Michael Rothery.

described Candoli as a "bristling aggressive modern soloist."

The quintet which is integrated with the large orchestra in this suite will be Candoli, trumpet; Fraser McPherson, flute and alto saxophone; Chris Gage, piano; Paul Ruhland, bass and Al Johnson, drums. The brass orchestra itself consists of four trumpets, four French horns and one tuba together with a percussion section consisting of timbales, conga drums and bongoes. The personnel is made up from members of Dave Robbins' regular Jazz Workshop group supplemented by brass players from the Vancouver Symphony orchestra.

The program was tape recorded before an audience of 600 invited guests in the acoustically perfect ballroom of the Hotel Vancouver. Technical operation by Bob Gray and the program is produced by Robert Chesterman.

Folk music no longer became an act. It was real. And perhaps it is this reality, in which folk singers sing about justice and freedom, which makes it such an honestly enjoyable art form. For these social values appear to be subjects that pop composers can't handle without becoming self-conscious.

Unlike many other groups and individuals singing folk music today, Reg Gibson and Jimmie Pirie have backgrounds which seem most natural to folk music.

Reg was a sort of boy wonder, singing professionally on the stage at the age of four in the days of the burlesque theatre, when the Orpheum and the Playhouse productions enjoyed great popularity in Winnipeg. He has sung on just about every radio station and in every theatre in Winnipeg. At the present time he is a regular performer on CBWT's singing Swingalong show, and is in demand as a featured guest on other CBC productions. Through the years he has sustained himself and his large family—two girls and twin boys—as a long distance truck-driver: an occupation, which perhaps because of its solitude and semi-heroic role in modern times, has been the subject of many contemporary folk songs. (One of the more famous is Ewan McColl's "The Truckdriver's Lament.") But now Reg enjoys a more stationary occupation as operations manager for an international trucking company.

Jimmie Pirie's life, steeped in a background of western and country music, is almost a parallel of Gibson's. At the age of seven, impressed by the guitar playing of Roy Rogers, he took up the instrument and began performing at the age of eleven with Jack Finlay and his Nightriders.

Ever since then he has travelled throughout Western Canada with various western music groups. At seventeen, in 1959, he became a member of the Tumbleweed Trio on CBWT's Stu Davis Show. Now Jimmie is the featured guitarist with the Selkirk Settlers on CBWT's Red River Jamboree.

But Jimmie's success in western music is only one facet of his musical ability. He is an excellent jazz guitarist, having played with the Frank Willis Jazz Group. During the Frolic '62 show—the New Year's CBC Winnipeg-produced spectacular—he established himself as a guitarist virtuoso by showing that he was an equally competent classical guitarist.

There have been several attempts to find definitions or explanations for folk music and songs. The one drawn up at the International Council of Folk Music is about as long as the neck of a guitar. But perhaps one of the most succinct comes from an illiterate Appalachian folk-singer by the name of Aunt Molly Jackson—"This is what a folk song really (sic) is . . . the folks composes there own songs about there lises (lives) an' there own home folks that lises around them!"

SPORTS

THIS IS THE WEEK of the world hockey championships, and what should have been one of the finest, and best-covered events in recent years, has been jaded somewhat by the decision of two top teams not to show.

Russia and Czechoslovakia refuse to participate on the grounds of discrimination against the East German team which was not allowed travel permits by the U.S.A.

The absence of the Iron Curtain countries almost clears the way for Canada in the event. Stiffest opposition for the Galt Terriers will be provided by the host country, United States, and Sweden.

Galt should have enough to win easily, despite recent appearances in western Canada which tend to disprove this theory. Terriers had difficulty beating senior teams in the west.

Extensive radio and television coverage of the world hockey championships at Colorado Springs has been curtailed and, at the time of publication, only two games of the entire championships were to be televised, including the final day meeting of Canada and the United States on March 18.

A half-hour radio report will be carried daily on the CBC's Dominion network.

In the Galt Terriers, Canada has an able representative, one well-mixed with veterans and younger players. However, one wonders just what the Terriers would have been able to do had Russia and Czechoslovakia entered. Trail Smoke Eaters barely won the world title in 1961, edging Czechoslovakia on a goals for-and-against basis.

Elsewhere in hockey, the dog-fights for second and fourth places in the National Hockey League could be settled by this week's Saturday night telecast of the game from Maple Leaf Gardens. Toronto plays Detroit Red Wings. Leafs have had trouble fending off the challenge of Chicago Black Hawks for second place, while Detroit has had its hands full trying to catch New York Rangers in the run for fourth place and the last spot in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Curlers will be able to get their fill Sunday afternoon, when the highlights of the Brier championships at Kitchener will be shown. This year's Brier is one of the finest of all time—with outstanding rinks representing nearly every province. Certainly the West has never been better, with defending world champion Hec Gervais skipping the Alberta entry, two-time world champion Ernie Richardson leading the Saskatchewan crew, veteran Reg Stone skipping British Columbia and Manitoba's popular young shot-maker Norm Houck leading his province. Bayne Secord, a Saskatoon native, won Ontario's title, and he becomes the first former Canadian high school champion to skip a rink in the Brier.

As usual, there will be five-pin bowling from the O'Connor bowl on Saturday afternoon.

Teaching Machines:

Teachers' Helper, or Passing Fad?

THE USES and educational value of "teaching machines" is the subject of controversy among North American educators. Many argue that the teaching machine, especially if used in such subjects as social studies, takes away the interpretive reading skill. Those who believe the machines belong in education counter with the theory that the machines will force an understanding of the meaning of instruction.

But while the controversy continues it seems certain that the teaching machine—and its method of programmed learning—is not just a passing fad. Thousands of dollars are being spent on machines and the special texts which are used; and their experimental operation in classrooms is going on in many schools in North America.

In Langley High School, just outside Vancouver, teaching machines are being used on a full-time basis in Grade Nine mathematics. The teacher of students learning by this method will explain the results he has achieved when CBC television's Close-Up offers a look at this revolutionary innovation this Sunday, March 11. Teacher James Clark will be seen discussing the use of machines with Bob Quintrell, who spent some time recently at Langley High School filming and interviewing teachers and students.

Dr. Thomas Martin, formerly superintendent of public schools in Toronto and now a manufacturer of teaching machines and texts, is interviewed on the program. Another guest is Dr. Archie MacKinnon, director of research for the Toronto Board of Education.

The principle behind the so-called teaching machine is that it offers a bit of information to a student, questions him on it and immediately tells him if he is wrong. If he is, the question is asked again in slightly different terms, and the process is repeated until the correct answer is given. This helps to overcome the problem of how to educate a class of 30 students with varying capacities for learning so that none becomes bored or is left behind.

An Affair of Honor

by JAMES BANNERMAN

ONE OF THE STORIES on the front page of the New York Times for March 23, 1929, told of the ceremonies with which Paris had paid tribute to Marshal Foch the day before. Another announced the beginning of the end of an era in moving pictures. "FOX IN TALKIES ONLY," the headline read. "SIGNS 200 SHOW FOLK. DROPS SILENT FILMS AFTER 18 MONTHS' PREPARATION FOR NEW POLICY." And a third front-page story, from New Orleans, said that: "The British auxiliary schooner 'Imalone,' of Belize, suspected of being a contraband carrier, was sunk off the Louisiana coast today in a battle with a Coast Guard craft."

The first two stories were entirely accurate. The third had almost everything wrong. The schooner wasn't British: she was Canadian. Her name wasn't "Imalone:" it was I'm Alone. She wasn't suspected of being a contraband carrier: she was known to be one. She had indeed been sunk by a vessel of the United States Coast Guard; but not after a battle, since she was unarmed.

Two days later the Times has just begun to straighten things out. Another story from New Orleans, again on the front page, said: "Manacled and under heavy guard, Captain John T. Randell and the crew of the British schooner I'm Alone, which was sunk Friday, as a rum runner, off the Louisiana coast by Coast Guard patrol boats, were brought here today."

You'll observe that the Times, one of the world's most respected and conscientious newspapers, still hadn't learned that the schooner was Canadian. Though it soon got that straightened out too, it wasn't until almost six years later that all the details of the I'm Alone case were finally established and double-checked—a job it took a joint Canadian-American commission of enquiry to do. The commission had been set up to determine whether or not the Coast Guard had been justified in sinking the schooner, and in the end decided it hadn't been, and that the government of the United States ought accordingly to apologize to the government of Canada. But some of the earlier mistakes of fact persisted in the minds of such members of the general public as had not long since forgotten the whole thing. And among the mistakes was the idea that Captain John Thomas Randell was, as those who believed it said, only a rum-runner.

JAMES BANNERMAN

I myself consider that Captain Randell, who was born in Trinity, Newfoundland, in 1880 and died in Halifax in 1944, was as brave and decent and capable a sailor as ever commanded a ship. I reached this high opinion of him after studying the hundreds of thousands of words of evidence in the I'm Alone case, and learning what I could about him apart from that. It explains why I chose to make him the subject of the little play of mine, which fleshes out the bare summary you've been reading here, and which is to be broadcast on CBC Radio's Halifax Theatre this week. It also explains why I called the play An Affair of Honour, because I think that's what he made out of what might easily have been nothing more than a sordid incident.
